Le site de presse de la BnF

RetroNews Edu, a service specifically designed to meet the needs of academics, researchers, and teachers seeking a complete and specialized e-resource. Building on the success of RetroNews, RetroNews Edu offers an enhanced and tailored experience, enabling optimal exploration of The French Press Archive.

AN UNIQUE RESOURCE FOR TEACHING AND RESEARCH

RetroNews Edu provides privileged access to over 2,000 newspapers published since 1631, covering vast historical and geographical areas. This collection includes the most influential titles such as Le Petit Parisien, Le Figaro, and Le Matin, as well as political, regional, and satirical newspapers, and now features a selection of contemporary newspapers, enabling a representative exploration of the French press. The collection is regularly completed with new titles.
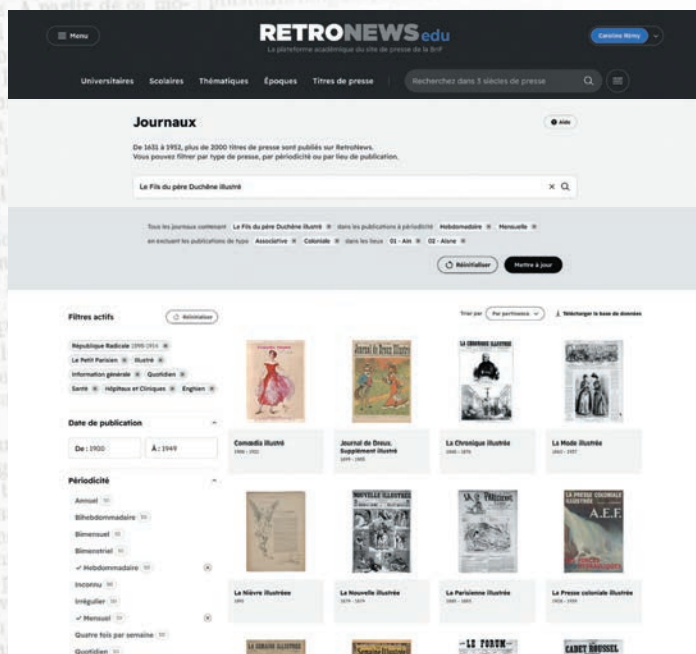

The service stands out for its editorial offering of reference, led by a team of experts including journalists and academics. Here, you will find in depth analyses, documentary series, videos, and audio documents, all designed to enhance the understanding of historical events as reported by the press. These resources make of RetroNews Edu a must-have service supporting large-scale research projects, as well as very precise ones.

ADVANCED AND INNOVATIVE RESEARCH TOOLS

RetroNews Edu is designed to facilitate teaching and academic research with advanced search functionalities. All newspapers have undergone Optical Character Recognition (OCR) and extensive semantic processing, allowing for deep and targeted searches. Searches can be performed by date, type of press, periodicity, and come with multifaceted filters including specific themes, people, places, and organizations.

Additionally, expert tools such as article downloads, and semantic data extraction are available to simplify the analysis of the sources. These advanced features enable researchers to explore and utilize the archive with increased precision and efficiency.
